

MORNING APPEAL.

Saturday.....July 23, 1887.

AMBITIOUS BOSTON GIRLS.

The fact that several hundred photographs of nude Boston girls have been seized by the police of the Hub and lodged into Court, is just now what is convulsing Boston society until it rocks like a tug boat in a cyclone. About every high-toned family in Boston is represented in the unique collection. The whole thing arises from stuffing Greek and Latin into the Boston girl's head. The old mythological fables and classical steamboats about Venus, Niobe, Pandion, Endymion, Diana, Aspasia and the balance of the early belles, have turned the Boston girl's head.

They got an idea that it would be a good scheme to assume the lack of costume of the old days of gods and goddesses and show by the aid of the camera that a Boston girl's figure was a good deal more classical in outline than any job turned out by Praxiteles. The result was that a lot of spindle-shanked, hollow-flanked, dish-chested women of cultured Boston have been posing, minus their clothes, before the photographer in the various attitudes assumed by the famous statuary of the world. All who have seen the photos agree that the Boston girl is a long way below the mark and that she must come West and feed up, before she tries the statuary business any more.

HANDS OFF.

The Graphic expresses the opinion that there was more in Kalakaua's threat to place himself under the protection of British war-ships than appears on the surface. It says: "Kapiolani easily raised a large loan in England, thereby giving that country a second mortgage upon Hawaii. The United States, however, cannot afford to let any European power entrench itself there. Hawaii comes within the scope of the Monroe Doctrine as much as any bit of American soil. If under the protectorate of England or Germany or Russia, Honolulu would be a perpetual bone of contention, and would be a constant menace to Uncle Sam's commerce on the Pacific Coast. The Old World powers must keep their hands off."

According to the APPEAL's idea the proper caper for Uncle Sam would have been to have tendered the Queen of the Islands an escort of a big man-of-war, and when the ship got there and found a revolution it could have posed as the protector of the King, and made him deed the whole works to the U. S., in return for Uncle Sam's keeping the mob off his palace. We could have snatched the whole Kingdom and shuffled the pack for a new deal before England got her fins in.

STANLEY.

The rumor comes from Africa that Stanley the famous journalist and explorer has been killed. Stanley gained more fame by his newspaper work, than perhaps any other man in his profession. He was sent out by the New York Herald to find Livingston and accomplished a task that had baffled the English Government. From a humble beginning he rose above all his competitors, and hob-nobbed with Kings.

His pluck, energy and courage carried him above all obstacles and in the following of his reportorial profession he penetrated the heart of Africa, took a hand in thirty-two battles in some of which he commanded, and now he is dead, dying with his harness on. He will pass down to history as one of the great explorers of the world.

—H. F. Hapgood sold to F. J. Grank, of Bullion, a two-year-old Galloway Bull for $325. It is evident that the stock men of Elko county are alive to the importance of improving their herds by crossing with the best stock to be obtained, and although the price paid for these animals may seem high, yet a few years experiment will prove the value of the investment.—Independent.
